SMALL BOY DROWNED.

Owen P. Leary of Lexington Takes Fatal Ride Upon Raft—Two Boy Companions Witness the Drowning-Help Arrives Too Late-Funeral Tuesday,

A ride on a raft at Grany Pond in Lexington resulted fatally to little Owen P. Leary Sunday afternoon, for losing his balance, he fell into the water and was drowned. Owen was 8 years old and a son of Timothy J. Leary of Vine street, Lexington With Eugene Buckley, aged 11 years, and Thomas Buckley, aged 7, Owen went to the pond about 4 o'clock. The boys had been playing nearby for some time, when Owen decided to board the raft, which was composed of old planks. No sooner had he stepped upon the float than it drifted away from the shore with its young vic tim. At first the lad enjoyed his nove ride, but when he thought of getting back to the shore he found he had no means of so doing. He stepped too near the edge of the raft and suddenly it tipped and he went into the water.

The elder Buckley boy realized the sit uation and tried to save his companion y reaching a pole to him. He saw the poy rise to the surface two or three time and saw his little hand extending out of water. Young Buckley worked hard to get the pole within reach of the outstretched hand, but did not succeed. When Owen sank out of sight the last ime the two Buckley boys started on the run for help, both crying as if their hearts would break. Frank Cobb, brakeman on the Boston & Maine rail road, attracted by the commotion, hur ried to the pond and succeeded in bring ing the little fellow to the shore just a Chief of Police Franks arrived on scene. Dr. C. H. Valentine, who had been summoned, tried to resuscitate the boy, but it was too late. Chief Franks took charge of the body and summoned Medical Examiner Blake, who viewed the remains and pronounced death due t accidental drowning. The funeral ser vice was at the home of the boy's parent on Vine street Tuesday afternoon.

GIRL AND MONEY GONE.

Mary Coffey, a domestic at the Arlington House in Arlington has left the town. After she went away it was learned that a pocket book containing $25, a gold chain and locket and two gold rangs had also disappeared. Naturally the disappearance of the one was connected with the loss of the other, and John C. Rauch, proprietor of the house. notified the Arlington police of the affair Tuesday. The missing money and jewelry is the property of other servants of the house. The missing woman was engaged about a week ago for general housework, and was secured from a Boston employment office. It is claimed the description given agrees with that of s woman for whom the police of other towns and cities are in search.

SEEKS TO RECOVER.

The town of Arlington has begun pro ceedings against Roland A. Swan, who is now in the jail at Cambridge awaiting trial at the next term of the superior court. The preliminary papers have been filed at the clerk of court's office. In the first count in the declaration plaintiff says that defendant owes it $5400 of money received by defendant to plaintiff's use as follows: On or about March 19, 1901, the sum of $3700, and on or about April 27, 1901, the sum of

In the second count plaintiff says that defendant owes it $5400 for moneys of the plaintiff unlawfully taken and retained by defendant as follows: On or about March 19, 1901, the sum of $3700 and on or about April 27, 1901, the sum of $1700. Both counts are for the same causes of action. The action is described as one of contract or tort.

BIRTHDAY REMEMBERED.

About 50 friends of John C. Rauch proprietor of the Arlington House of Arlington, were his guests last Saturday afternoon and evening. The occasion of their presence was his thirty-third birthwhich was duly celebrated. There were friends present from Boston, Brighton, Jamaica Plain and Lexington. Dinner was served during the afternoon, and later Dr. Albert A. McAuley of Brighton arose and after making a bright speech, presented the host in behalf of those present, a handsome combination book case and writing desk. Mr. Rauch responded in an interesting and easy manner. The affair was a decided social success, and all were well pleased with the way in which the day was spent.

F. N. WIER TO RETIRE.

New District Attorney Must Be Selected-Assistant George A. Sanderson, of Littleton, a Candidate for Promo-

District Attorney Fred N. Wier, of Lowell, will not be a candidate for another term. He is satisfied to step down and out. As far back as last winter, Mr. Wier made up his mind to relinquish at the end of the present term the position which he has held for nine years. Mr. Wier made known his intention to retire to a few friends, with the result that the information was made public early this week, much to Mr. Wier's displeasure.

In a chat with an Enterprise reporter, Tuesday, Mr. Wier said: "Yes, it is a fact that I will retire as district attorney, at the end of the present term. I feel that I have held the office as long as I ought to, and I am now ready to get through. The fact is that my private in siness has increased to such an extent that I must give my whole time to it. I shall probably keep my Boston office, but my practice is centred chiefly in Lowell. I made up my mind list winter not to stand for another term. I am sorry for certain reasons that my intentions were made public at this time for I had intended waiting until after summer before making the announcement. However, now that the story is out, that settles it it hardly seems nine years since I assumed the district attorneyship. Among other things, I desire to acknowledge the courtesy and during my terms of office."

sire to acknowledge the courtesy and fairness of the newspapers toward mc during my terms of office."

Furing Mr. Wier's long service as prosecuting attorney for the county, there have been many important cases to deal with, and at no time has Mr. Wier been found wanting. It can justly be said that Mr. Wier has fulfilled the duties of the office most acceptably. His illness just before the Eastman trial which prevented him from conducting that case for the government was indeed unfortunate, as he had spent considerable time and put in a great deal of hard work in the preparation of the case.

Mr. Wier has figured in several murder trials as district attorney, many embezzlement, bribery and other important cases, and he has met with much success. During his entire service, Mr. Wier has been greatly aided by his faithful and able assistant, George A. Sanderson, Mr. Wier succeeded Mr. Cooney, and there was a sharp contest for the nom-irration, It will be remembered that City Solicitor Pevey, then assistant district attorney, was a candidate against Mr.

Wier.

The salary of the district attorney is $2400, and that of the assistant, $1500.

Assistant District Attorney George A.

Sanderson, of Littleton, is a candidate for district attorney, and thus far he is the only one spoken of for the place. Friends are already at work in his behalf. Mr. Sanderson has the warm support of Mr. Wier, whose assistant he has been for nine years. Mr. Sanderson has shown much ability in his position, having assisted and also conducted many important cases. His opening argument in the Eastman case was praiseworthy and won a great deal of favorable comment.

Mr. Sanderson was born in Littleton, 38 years ago, and always resided in Middlesex county. He graduated from Yale in 1885, and from the Boston University law school in '87. He has practiced in Boston since '87. He is a very genial fellow, and has a wife and three children.

HON. JOHN E. PARRY.

HON. JOHN E. PARRY.

The city of Cambridge for the past fifteen years has been represented in the Massachusetts senate by men of unusual force and character, some of whom have exerted a large influence in the shaping of legislation. In that group the service of none stands out more conspicuously than that rendered by the present incumbent, Hon. John E. Parry. Mr. Parry brought to the office years of successful business experience, which alone is one of the best qualifications for grappling with those complex problems and adjusting them to the best interests of the people. Mr. Parry has developed remarkably as a public speaker in the last year, and he now ranks as one of the ablest debaters in the senate. Cambridge is to be congratulated that the senator has consented to serve another year, and when his term of office closes on Beacon Hill his steps will undoubtedly be turned into wider spheres of usefulness, bringing larger opportunities and increasing responsibilities. We feel sure that whatever position he is called to fill he will always exhibit the same firmness, candor and spirit of fairness which has characterized his past official life.

nis health, Joseph Van Ness returned to his home, the "Fieldstone," on Pleasant street, East Lexington, last Saturday, and died Monday morning. The funeral was Friday.

Mr. Van Ness, publisher of the Superintendent and Foreman, a technical shoe trade Journal, was widely known throughout the country, and especially in shoe leather circles, where he had hosts of friends. He was born at Andover, December 12, 1849, but when very young was taken west by his parents, and he began to show an aptitude for books and a love for nature which remained with him through his life. He attended the University of Illinois for a time, but later came east and took the course at Cornell, from which college he graduated with high honors in 1878. When he left college his health was greatly impaired, and he spent four years in travel. During this time he wrote a series of papers on the "Irrigating system of the west," which were printed by a Denver daily, and which gave the author considerable distinction.

He became identified with newspaper work in Colorado for a number of years, and later with the Shoe and Leather Review of Chicago. He came to Boston about 20 years ago, and there was employed on the Shoe and Leather Reporter. He went into the general advertising business for himself about 15 years ago, and in 1886 founded the trade journal which he has so skilfully managed. In the spring of 1898 he was crushed in the railroad accident at Winter Hill, two ribs were broken and his chest compressed in the wrock, so that, upon his partial recovery from the injuries, he was left with a cough which caused his decline. He never regained his health, and for two years has been obliged to travel in the south, in Mexico and California, where it was hoped he would impressed in the wrock, so that, upon his partial recovery from the injuries, he was left with a cough which caused his home again, he was brought to East Lexington, Saturday. The beautiful house and grounds known as the Fieldstone has been his home of seven years, moving there from

KILLED BY A FALL.

William Connors, of 44 Beacon street, Arlington, was killed by a fall from a wagon, Monday morning, while attempting to rope securely a load of manure he was about to take away. He was engaged as a teamster by W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, and had gone to Boston at an early hour. The wagon was loaded and Connors tried to fasten it securely in the usual way. He was standing on the wagon seat, which was well up in the air, and was tugging at the rope, when suddenly it gave way, and he was dropped to the ground. He struck on the back of his head with crushing ferce and was unconscious from that time. He was removed to the Boston City hospital where it was found that the spine was fractured. The victim died during the day, and after the body was viewed by the medical examiner it was taken to Arlington. The deceased was 43 years old, and leaves a wife, formerly Miss Mary Mulcahy, and four small children. The funeral services were Thursday at St. Agnes' church, at 9 o'clock. A requiem mass was celebrated by they. A. S. Malone, Appropriate music was rendered by the choir, under the direction of Miss Lucy J. Butler. The pallbearers were James Quinlan, Patrick Hickey, James Hoar, Daniel Hoar, David Sliney, John Sliney, Jeremiah Sliney and David Collins. The interment was at Mt. Pleasant cemetery.

Court Thursday.

The case of John G. Smith, charged with killing Officer Garrett J. Cody, of Arlington, has been continued in the third district court at Cambridge until July 25. At that time the preliminary hearing will undoubtedly be held. The case came up Thursday, but Clement G. Morgan, counsel for the defendant, asked for a continuance, and it was granted. There was an interested and expectant crowd of spectators in the court room long before the case was called up, and the witnesses for the government having been summoned by Chief of Police Harriman, were ready to proceed with their testimony. The wife of the defendant was in the court room, and other of his relatives were there to cheer him by their presence. Judge Almy was on the bench.

When Smith was brought into the

when Smith was brought into the court room, securely handcuffed to Deputy Wardwell, there was perfect sillence in the room, and all eyes were on the principal in one of the tragedies which has caused all Arlington to mourn. The prisoner did not look to the right nor left until he reached the prisoners' dock, and then, after the handcuffs were removed, he gradually nerved himself to a casual glance about him. Smith was dressed differently than he was at his first appearance in the court room when he wore his old working clothes. evidently tried his best to look cool and collected. But few more powerful look-ing prisoners ever were seen in the court-room than Smith. His tall figure and his massive frame made him appear like a grant when he arose when addressed by the court. His arms seem to be twice the size of those of the average man, and his head is large and round. He is not so dark-complected as the average negro, but his countenance is that of the typical southern colored man. He did not speak a word in the dock or out of it while in the court room, except once or twice when he conversed in whispers with his attorney, Mr. Morgan, who is also colored. THE CODY FUND.

Contributions have continued to pour in for the Cody fund which was started last week Wedipeeday by Arlington people to show to the family of the deceased police officer their sympathy and esteem. It was requested by Mrs. Cody that the papers be restrained from circulation, for although she highly appreciates the motives of the subscribers to the fund, she preferred there would be no further soliciting. There has been then since last week subscriptions turned into the fund without any solicitation whatever.

In the list published last week, a number of the $1 contributors were recorded as giving to the Cody fund, but few of them were then anxious to do. The contributors subscribed their money to the petition when it called for flowers for the fund without any solicitation whatever.

OFFICER ROBERT H. FALL.

Robert H. Fall has been appointed patrolman by the Arlington board of selectmen to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Officer Garrett J. Cody. Although there were several candidates for the position, Mr. Fall, who has been a special for some time, was an easy winner. The new officer is an Arlington boy, having been born here Aug. 6, 1872. He atterded the Russell school and the Arlington high. He held the position of ccachman for one year, and was then given a position on the Boston Elevated street railway in whose employ he has been for six years, and nearly all the while has run as conductor on the night car. He left the company's employ Nov. 24 of last year. He has been in New Hampshire since then, but returned here in the spring. For the past three years he has been a special officer, and was not long ago appointed a member of hose 3, a position he will now reluctantly resign. He is a member of Division 43. A. O. H. of a Cambridge lodge of Foresters of America, of the Arlington Veteran Firemen's association, and of the North Cambridge Athletic club. He will travel the beat formerly covered by Officer Daniel M. Hooley, who has been North Cambridge Athletic club. He will travel the beat formerly covered by Officer Daniel M. ARLINGTON'S TAX RATE.

The assessors have determined the tax rate for the town this year to be $18.90 on a thousand dollars. This is an increase of ninety cents over the rate of last year, and no doubt, there will be some hard feelings when the tax collector sends out his bills. The advantage derived from an increase in valuation is more than over balanced by an extra amount of money to be expended.

THE GIRL HE MARRIED IN SECRET.

Along a dreary country road, which was half buried in the mud and slush of a warm winter, a young woman hobbled, so faintly and with such evident difficulty that it seemed every moment as it her wearied frame would collapse and she would sink to the ground, never to rise again. She was poorly but neatly clad, and a casual glance would not have suggested extreme poverty, but a second look at the hollow, wasted cheeks, the wild eyes, the shaking hands, indicated only too clearly the demon of hunger and utter

She was ill, sick almost to death, but with her chin slightly poised in the air, with a kind of dumb resolution to struggle forward somewhere, she half clung to a low wooden fence which ran along by the public road. It seemed as if she had exhausted her little stock of endurance. Where she had come from, where she was going, she had almost forgotten. She was conscious of a dull, gnawing pain, which was hunger, or, at any rate, an intense longing for food, without the pleasure of appetite, and an overmastering'desire to lie down and sleep. Presently the dull crunch of carriage wheels and the dull thud of a pair of high stepping horses were heard on the road, but the lonely woman seemed not to hear. In the course of the day she had encountered hundreds of wayfarers, but not one had noticed her plight, or, at any rate. offered to help. Some had glanced at her almost with repulsion; others had not appeared even to see her, being so wrapped up in their own affairs. Consequently she had long since ceased to indulge in a vain hope of meeting with sympathy.

This carriage caught her up as others had done. It contained a young lady of about the same age perhaps as herself, who was dressed in furs and sat up "Recommended for promotion," it ran, who was dressed in furs and sat up straight in her carriage, the very type of unbending aristocratic pride. riage passed her as all the others had done, and the occupant glanced round at the bent figure on the path, panting, tottering, stumbling along. Then a clear, harp voice said "Stop!"

That one word made all the difference. It was only spoken in an impulse, half of kindness, half of curiosity, but no human being will ever know how much influence it had upon more than one life. The lady alighted from the carriage and picked her way carefully and daintily through the mud, with her petticoats lifted so as to avoid all possibility of contamination, and stood by the girl's side. "Where are you going, my good woman?" she inquired, somewhat severely.

In reply the young woman looked at her with lackluster eyes. Her senses were numbed, and she could find no answer. Where was she going? How could

"I feel bad," said the girl in a low voice, and she clung to the fence a little

A frown appeared on Mrs. Stanton's face.

"Are you trying to get to Stowbridge?" she asked.

The girl nodded. She had no idea where Stowbridge was, but it would serve as well as any other place.

The footman had jumped off his seat and stood by his mistress' side. "Stowbridge is seven miles away, is it not?" inquired Mrs. Stanton.

"Yes, ma'am," said the man, touching his heat.

"I'm afraid you will scarcely be able to reach the town," she said in perplexity, turning to the girl. In reply she gave a short gasp and sank to the ground in a This seemed, on the whole, to prove the truth of Mrs. Stanton's words, and she looked more perplexed than ever.

There was perhaps half a minute's silence; then she said, "Help me put her in the carriage."

The man seemed to be surprised, for no one knew better than her servants Mrs. Stanton's cold, unemotional nature. That she should deliberately pick up an unknown wanderer and take her into her carriage was almost as surprising as if he had been invited to ride there himself. He had not yet learned that a cold, reserved manner does not always bespeak lack of feeling.

Together they lifted the semiconscious girl into the luxurious victoria. Mrs. Stanton took her seat, and the footman stood waiting for instructions.

"Where to, ma'am?" he asked. "Home," came the answer in a quick, clear voice. He touched his hat again and tried not to look surprised.

"Rummy go, isn't it?" he whispered to the coachman. The rummiest go I ever saw," said that functionary gravely. ''Ow do you account for it?" whispered the footman, as ff he were discussing a new form of influenza. "Don't know, I'm sure. I've noticed a wonderful change ever since the captain went to the war. Seems as if the missis had got a bit more humanlike." "First time she's known trouble, I sup-

"That's it," said the coachman philosophically, "and trouble does people a power of good. Makes the heart beat

A few minutes later and the carriage swept up the handsome avenue that led to Newark house. Mrs. Stanton's orders were, as usual, both prompt and decided. The house keeper was to see the young woman put comfortably to bed. She herself fetched brandy for her. The footman was to ride off for Dr. Langfield and if possible bring him back.

All this was carried out with the swift-sess that money can procure. The doctor, after visiting his queer patient, who not spoken a word since being installed in her comfortable quarters, pursed bis lips curiously. "This young woman is very ill, Mrs. Stanton," he said. "I recommend you to send her to the workhouse at once

Mrs. Stanton frowned slightly. "Would it be safe to move her?" she asked.
"Well-er-hardly," said the medical man, "but if you don't get rid of her you may have her on your hands for a month

For a moment Mrs. Stanton hesitated. "I cannot help it," she said, with sudden decision. Here she is, and here she must

The doctor shrugged his shoulders and smiled cynically. "You know nothing about her, my dear Mrs. Stanton," he "Isn't it rather eccentric to take a strange woman from the road into your house like this? Why do you do it?" "I hardly know," said Mrs. Stanton.

"Perhaps it was a mad impulse; perhaps it was an inspiration. I was wondering what Fred was doing now, whether he was in any danger. Then I began to hum the 'Absentminded Begger,' andnow, don't laugh, doctor, because I feel very serious about it—just as I got to the line, 'The girl he married secret,' my eyes fell on that poor creature, and I thought to myself, Suppose she is the wife of some poor soldier and isn't on the strength of the regiment, and somehow-I couldn't help bringing her home." The doctor looked rather amused, but when Mrs. Stanton suddenly burst into tears he pronounced it hysteria and recommended port wine and quinine. However, the unknown wanderer was tenderly nursed and cared for, and a few weeks later another little life was born into the world and with much difficulty nourished and coaxed into active exist told her story. She was, in fact, the wife of a soldier, and in dumb faithfulness, which was foolish and pathetic enough, she had believed she ought to keep her marriage secret until Private John Little claimed her be-fore all the world. To be sure, the poor creature could have had help from some of the public charities, but she was too ignorant and timid and perhaps too proud to ask. So she staggered out into the world with her sad burden to live or die, as Providence directed, for Mr. John Little had gone off joyfully enough to the war without realizing the misery he had left behind him, an "absentminded beggar," if you like, but he was "doing his country's work," and "it ain't the time for sermons."

A few weeks later came the full par ticulars of a battle, and the two women read them together. For the details of the battle they cared little. There was one paragraph that in their eyes swalwith military brevity, "Private John Little of the East Surrey for saving the life of Captain Fred Stanton, field artillery, Advancing under a heavy fire, Little picked up Captain Stanton, who was severely wounded, and carried him to a place of safety."

The two women looked at each other in speechless wonder.

"What was the date, ma'am, of the battle?" asked the young mother, with a sudden light in her eyes.

"The 15th of December," said Mrs. Stanton, trembling with sudden excitement, "the very day that I brought you here, and"-after a moment's thought-"it happened at almost exactly the same time."

"An there's some as says there ain't no Gawd," said the woman under her breath. "I reckon he see what my Jack done, an then he remembered the gal as he'd married secret.

Mrs. Stanton frowned. Evidently the creature had been drinking, and she half Justice Brewer's Early Hours.

"For many years I have been getting up at 4 o'clock in the morning," said Justice Brewer when the conversation gave room for an inquiry about his methods of work. "Lately the hour has been 5 o'clock, for I find I enjoy taking more sleep. My retiring hour at night is usually about 10 o'clock."

When some surprise was expressed at this early rising, he added: "I began that when I lived in Kansas. As a young judge I was very ambitious, and at night I found myself dreaming over the cases I had tried during the preceding day. I did not rest well, and this troubled me se much that I consulted a physician, an old friend of mine. He advised me to drop work in the evening. In those days we had dinner at noon and a light meal, our supper, toward nightfall. I was to go out in the evening with my wife, attend the theater, play cards or go to parties, but forget the law. Then I might get up as early in the morning as I pleas-

"I followed his advice and gradually acquired the habit of rising at 4 o'clock. I began to sleep soundly and without dreaming of anything so far as I could tell. I know many people do their best work in the night, but my best hours are in the early morning."-Topeka State Journal.

Primroses In Covent Garden.

One of the greatest days in Covent Garden is that on which the primroses first come. They are tied up in ungraceful little bundles just big enough to form a buttonhole, and a dozen may cost you anywhere from eightpence to a shilling. Thus massed, they make a respectable And there is one strange thing about primroses—you may go homeward along the Strand laden with roses, daffodils or irises or even carrying a tall lily in a pot, and none of the workmen you pass will say a word or even seem to look at you. But it is different with primroses. If you have these, they all look and are interested. They all make some such remark as, "The spring cannot be far off now that the primroses have Very likely one of them will stop and, after a brief apology, ask you if the flowers are fairly cheap, and the odds are then that you give him one of the little bunches and are most gratefully thanked. -Chambers' Journal.

The Sun."

All doctors have tried to cure CA-TARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointaimed to cure, while pastes and oint-ments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CA-TARRH, has at last perfected a Treatspecialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonder, full remedy is known as "SNUFFLES the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE" and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use. "SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently, and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD.

THE HOME GOLD CURE.

n Ingenious Treatment by Which Drunkards are Being Cured Daily in Spite of Themselves.

No Noxious Doses. No Weakening of the Nerves. A Pleasant and Positive Cure for the Liquor Habit.

It is now generally known and understood that Drunkenness is a disease and not weakness. A body filled with poison, and nerves completely shattered by periodical or constant use of intoxicating liquors, requires an antidote capable of neutralizing and eradicating this poison, and destroying the craving for intoxicants. Sufferers may now cure them-selves at home without publicity or loss of time from business by this wonder-ful "HOME GOLD CURE" which has been perfected after many years of close study and treatment of inebriates. The faithful use according to directions of this wonderful discovery is positively guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. guaranteed to cure the most obstinate case, no matter how hard a drinker. Our records show the marvelous transformation of thousands of Drunkards into sober, industrious and upright men, WIVES CURE YOUR HUSBANDS!! CHILDREN CURE YOUR FATHERS!! This remedy is in no sense a nostrum but a specific for this disease only, and it so skillfully devised and prepared that it is thoroughly soluble and pleasant to the taste, so that it can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without the knowledge of the person taking it. Thousands of Drunkards have cured themselves with this priceless remedy, and as many more have been cured and made temperate men by having the "CURE" administered by loving friends and relatives without their knowledge in coffee or tea, and believe today that they discontinued of their own free will. DO NOT WAIT. Do not be deluded by apparent and misleading "improvement." Drive out the disease at once and for all time. The "HOME GOLD CURE" is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, thus placing within reach of everybody a treatment more effectual than others costing $25 and $50. THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, THIRD QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, JULY 14.

Text of the Lesson, Gen. iii, 1-15. Memory Verses, 14, 15-Golden Text, Rom. v, 20-Commentary Prepared by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1901, by American Press Association.] 1-5. This is our introduction to the great enemy of God and man, that old serpent, the devil and satan (Rev. xii, 9; xx, 2), the prince of this world, the prince of the power of the air, the spirit that now worketh in the children of dis-obedience (John xiv, 80; Eph. ii, 2). He would come between God and man, he would break up their fellowship and rob man of his inheritance, and to do this he comes in the guise of a friend, using the wisest and perhaps the fairest of all the heasts of the field as his medium, for it every tool sterilized by means of an antiis evident from verse 14 that it was septic. Also, a bootblack in constant something new, and the result of the attendance. Shop never closed except something new, and the result of the curse, for the serpent to go upon his belly and eat dust. From this chapter to Rev. xx we see the devil in conflict with God and man, yet tolerated by God until the time shall come to put him in the pit and later in the place prepared for him-the lake of fire. We are taught to resist him, to give him no place, to stand against him (I Pet. v, 8, 9; Eph. iv, 27; vi, 11), but we cannot well do this if we are ignorant of his devices. Therefore we are here and elsewhere made acquainted with him and his ways that we may recognize him and resist him and overcome him with the shield of faith and the sword of the Spirit even as our Lord Himself did in the wilderness. In his first recorded utterance, "Yea, hath God said?" we see that he questions the word of God, and when any one from that day to this questions the word of God he is for the time being in the service of the devil. He questions the love of God, suggesting to the woman that if God loved them He would not keep from them even the fruit of one 6-8. In the company of and listening to the adversary the woman quickly becomes deceived and blinded and led astray. She adds to the word of God verse 3) and actually seems to think that her evil counselor is right and God is wrong, and she desires the fruit which now seems to her so pleasant, and she took it and ate it and gave it also to her husband, and he ate it. Thus by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin and by the disobedience of one many were made sinners (Rom. v, 12, 19). Their fellowship with God was broken, they were afraid of Him and sought to hide from Him, they lost their glorious garments of light and made for themselves as a substitute aprons of fig leaves. As to their being clothed with light, they were made in the image of God, and Ps. civ, 2, says that God covers Himself with light as with a garment. This does not conflict with Gen. ii, 25, for as to putting on clothes they were naked. How seemingly small, but how great and farreaching, their sin, affecting all mankind, for "in Adam all die" (I Cor. xv, 22).

9. "And the Lord God called unto Adam and said unto him, Where art thou?" The first recorded question of God in Scripture shows Him to us seeking the lost that He may forgive and restore them. It was evidently His custom to walk and talk familiarly with Adam and Eve in Eden, but a change came over man because of sin, and we have the sad and sorrowful sight of the creature seeking to hide from his loving Creator. Man's sin only makes more manifest the love and loveliness of God, and we see Him who afterward came to earth as God manifest in the flesh to seek and Rock Asphalt and Trini- Save the lost (for every manifestation of God is through His Son, John i, 18), lovdad Asphalt Floors and ingly seeking His erring ones. He is still doing this, and His question to each one still is, Where art thou? Happy are those who can gratefully reply, In Christ, redeemed by His precious blood.

and He pronounces judgment upon the serpent, the woman and the man, but in His word to the serpent He tells of a coming deliverer. In this verse (15) we have the new birth (enmity with the devil), the conflict between the unrighteous and the righteous (thy seed and her seed). the humanity of the Saviour (the seed of the woman). His sufferings (thou shalt bruise His heel), His divinity and glorious victory (He shall bruise thy head) -at least a fivefold abundant statement of the great redemption. In the sentence upon Adam the earth is included, and thorns and thistles grow as a result of the curse. Thus the creation was made subject to vanity not willingly; it had no voice nor choice in the matter, and it shall yet be delivered and made to re joice in the liberty of the glory of the children of God (Rom. viii, 20, 21), for our Lord wore a crown of thorns, and the curse shall in due time be removed from the earth (Rev. xxii, 3). As a result of the work of Christ the whole earth shall yet be filled with righteousness and peace and the glory of the Lord (Num. xiv, 21; Isa. xi, 9; Hab. ii, 14; Isa. xxxii, 1, 17). If we would see and share this glory, we must be able to say from the heart at least the first four clauses of Isa. lxi, 10, and we cannot do this unless we see the significance of verse 21 of this Gen. iii and profit by it. See then the Lord God with His own hand, by the shedding of the blood of the sacrifice, providing redemption clothing for Adam and Eve typical of the garments of salvation which He has provided for us by Wheelwright shoeing and Jobbing promptly attended to.

Carriage and Sign Paint
left in with morality, if any, or fancied righteousness, which if they cling to are like those in Rom. x, 8. The Lord God Himself without any help from mortals provides the righteousness He demands and offers it freely to all who are willing and offers it freely to all who are willing to drop their fig leaf aprons (Rom. iii, 24; viii, 1; x, 4). Eden was preserved after man was driven from it, and we have every reason to believe that it continued till the deluge. The flaming sword points on to Zech. xiii, 7, and to Colortha, where the grand were satisfied. Golgotha, where the sword was satisfied and the way opened to enter paradise. The cherubin tell of the future glory of he redeemed when the whole earth shall be an Eden. See their song in Rev. v, 9, 10. Since Adam was driven from Eden no one has been born in Eden, and the only way into it is by Him against whom he sword awoke. In chapter iv we have the two religions set forth in Cain and Abel-man's way of self righteousness and bringing what he calls his best and God's way of putting away sin by sacrifice, which latter way Abel accepted (Heb. ix, 22; xi, 4).

THE MOTIVE POWER.

Not he who tunnels through the stubborn seone Not he who boasts the mettle of Ajax Nor, Zeuslike, hurls thunder from a thron

But he who stoops to watch the daisy grow, Who seeks the sap within the sapling's sheath, And he who learns by force of mind to know The marvels of the universe beneath.

Not he who rests upon the glory won, Not he who sighs to have his life work through But he who, in the midst of what is done, Impatient stands for what is still to do.

Martha Penny's se Ghost se

Ŏ0000000000000000000 "But surely there are more rooms?" The young widow who had come down to Garland to hire a little house for the summer had followed the agent into the two story cottage and was staring about

"Only four rooms?" she said. "Surely there were ten-I mean that the house looks larger on the outside.

"Oh, there were ten originally, ma'am," the agent replied. "There were ten, but the rest are boarded up. This is simply the wing, but you have a parlor, a dining room and two bedrooms, besides the little outside kitchen, which is a building by itself, and the rent is actually nomi-

"But the folly of boarding up six good rooms," said the lady. "The parlor with the wainscot and the black marble man-

"You know the house?" cried the agent. "Oh, in houses of this sort you always find a black marble mantel and a wainscot," said the lady. "And on the other side of the hall the sitting room and spare bedroom and three bedrooms up stairs and the linen closet and bathroom-the long, dark linen closet."

"The ghost always comes out of that," said the agent.

"Oh, ho!" cried the lady. "The cat is out of the bag. The house is haunted?"
"Yes, ma'am," replied the agent. "It has that reputation among ignorant people, but since the main building has been boarded in the figure has never been seen by any one."

"The figure?" asked the lady. "All in white like an ironing board?" "All in white, but like a pretty girl of 16," replied the agent. "I remember the murder myself. My father was in the real estate business, where I am now. I was a schoolboy. I remember how the news ran through the village that Martha Penny had been killed by wild Jack Parker and how I rushed up with the crowd to see her. Yes, ma'am, I saw her lying weltering in her blood across the threshold of the linen closet."

The lady shuddered and sat down in the large chintz covered armchair of the room they had entered.

"You can go and play in the garden," she said to the little boy whom she led by the hand. "Don't go out of sight.

Now, tell me the story, Mr. Brick." "Very sensible to send the child away," the agent said. "Well, the facts were these: Martha Penny lived as seamstress with Mrs. Parker. They made her one of the family. Jack fell in love with her. The story goes that she refused him and that he said that she should never marry any other man. Then she declared that she meant to go away, and she was getting ready to go when she saw him with blazing eyes coming down the passage and ran into the linen closet. A black servant watched it all. As he passed the door he shot her. They arrested him and took him off to prison. But while the body was waiting for the coroner it disappeared, no one ever knew how. Mrs. Parker had taken to her bed. Black Ann had been afraid to sit in the room with the murdered girl. In the night Martha Penny's corpse vanished.

The jury made up their minds that Jack was crazy, and he was locked up awhile, though he swore that the pistol went off by accident. When he was let out again, his mother was dead. He is quite a rich man, but he never could bear to live on his property. He has a room at the hotel and has let all the land. At first he let the house also, but the tenants were all scared away by the ghost, they said, so five years ago he boarded up the main building and only lets the wing. Every summer people hire it. It is prettily furnished, you see, with new things. The old stuff is all in the old rooms. They do say that they hear noises in the big building, but probably rats make them. And, Mrs. Smith, you don't look like a lady who would be afraid

"Martha Penny's ghost?" interrupted the lady. "Indeed I am not. Poor little Martha wouldn't do no one any harm. should be much more afraid of wild Jack Parker, though he is alive."

"He's an altered man, ma'am," said the agent, "quite broken, though he is rather young in years." "I'll take the house, Mr. Brick," said the widow, rising and beckoning through the open window to her little boy, "and my servant and I and little Tom will move in on Monday."

They did so, and soon flowers bloomed in the garden and at the window. Sometimes at night—yes, at midnight—when little Tom and the maid were sound asleep, the lady, wrapped in a double gown and with woolen slippers on her feet, would glide out into the hall and there, with her ear to the light partition that divided the wing from the main building, would listen to feet that went to and fro, to wails and moans, to what seemed to her prayers and to many repetitions of the name "Martha Penny—Martha Penny" but oftenest "Martha" alone. She never spoke of this to any one, and it was plain that she felt no terror, but sometimes she wept bitterly, as if she was very sorry for the poor, wandering ghost.

This went on for months until one night Mrs. Smith did a strange thing. She arose in the middle of the night and let down the great coll of her brown hair and braided it in one braid and tied it with white ribbon. She dressed herself all in white and over her head threw a square of tulle. Then she left her house, taking a lantern with her, and stole to-ward a side door of the main building and tried a key in the lock and entered.

The place was dry with dust, and dust rolled beneath her feet as she climbed the stairs, and spiders crawled along the balustrades and up the walls. She passed the big chamber and the little chamber and stopped at the linen closet. Opening the door, she saw piles of clothes and sheets and towels and pillowcases, once white, but now powdered gray, as though snow of that hue had fallen on them. She lowered her lantern and beheld across the sill a stain of blood and within, on the floor, a deeper one, but she did And she certainly did. not shudder. Indeed a smile crossed her

"To ask your forgiveness," the man replied. "Without it I am lost in this world and the next. Speak to me, sweet angel; tell me that you know that I did not kill you with intent to do so. Let the world think what it will. Tell me you know it was not so-that you knew it even when you fell there, where you stand now-tell me so and save my soul!"

"When I fell," the faint voice whispered, "when the blood gushed from the wound you gave me I believed that you had shot me purposely. In this belief I lost my consciousness. Yes, when I seemed to die, I thought you had killed me."

"But now?" asked Jack. "Oh, unhappy man," replied the spirit, "night after night I have heard you moans; night after night I have heard you swear by all that is holy to your innopeace. We shall meet again, and I forgive you." With a cry the man flung himself upon the floor, and great sobs burst from his bosom. "At last!" he gasped, "at last! Oh, dear angel, at last. Oh, God be praised!" The white figure came nearer to the fallen man. It bent over him. "Jack." it said in more earthly tones, "I am so glad that you did not mean to kill me. Poor boy, you were always handling that revolver recklessly, but you know you threatened me. I loved you, Jack, but I could not marry you-your mother was so proud, and yet she had been so good to me, a poor little orphan. So I swore to myself that I would go away and never see you again unless she ance. called me back. That is why I refused you, Jack; that is why.' Thrilling and chilling, Jack lifted himed face.

"Certainly I am really mad at last," he said.

But the voice, now even more distinct and full of earthly tenderness, went on: "No, Jack, no; you are quite sane, quite sane. Remember how the body of poor Martha Penny was spirited away. Have you never thought that perhaps she was not dead, though that stupid old doctor, in his dotage, declared her so? Jack, poor Jack, she was alive. But when she came to herself the horror she felt that you should murder her was very great. And yet she did not wish to give any evidence that would send you to prison. She resolved to fly. The old negress helped her away and lied to cover the act. Jack, I am no ghost. I am alive. I am flesh and blood. Touch my hand. I give you leave. Poor Jack, poor fellow, how you

"As they suffer in hades," he said and humbly put his lips to the hem of her

"I worked hard for awhile; then a good old man married me," she went on. "He was kind as a father, and I have a little I am a widow now, and I came back to see the old place. I live in the wing that the agent had to let, and night after night I heard you through the partition, weeping and praying forgiveness of my ghost, swearing you did not mean to harm me. And I meant that you should only think my ghost forgave you. But I-I could not help telling the truth, dear Jack, once I saw you so near me and so broken hearted."

Then indeed Jack grew bolder and dared to touch her hands and to lift them to his lips. He was thankful and humble, as though heaven had vouchsafed him a vision of angels, and he left her at her door as he might have parted from one. But after all she was a living wom-an, he a man who loved her, and ere the autumn leaves fell they were wed.

Unexpected Praise.

Dr. Guthrie, an authority on military surgery some 50 years ago, was a kindly man, although somewhat brusque in manner. Sir Joseph Fayrer says:

I was his house surgeon, and we got on very well together. One day when we were going through the wards with a large following of distinguished visitors, foreign surgeons and others, we stopped by the bedside of an interesting case, where Guthrie had found fault with the dresser for something he had done or left

"I dare say you think you're a remark-ably clever fellow, don't you?"

"No, sir," said the youth earnestly, "I don't."

"But you are, though," said Guthrie and passed on.

The Baby's Five Minutes.

Benefits the Right Kind.

If college education unfits a woman for the "average domestic life," then college education is a failure. But it does notnot the right kind of a college (and I might add, if I dared, the right kind of a woman).

How can education unfit a woman for life if we accept what is to my mind the finest definition of education, that given by Edward Thring: "The transmission of life from the liv ing, through the living, to the living." When people speak of the college education of men, they think of all that goes with a college education—the athletic training, the play of mind upon mind, of character upon character, the influence of the teachers upon the taught, the value of association with other men, the finding of one's mental and moral level-all the subtle but potent influences that make for character. When, on the other hand, people speak of the college education of women—possibly because it is usually discussed more strenuously—they apparently think only of book learning. Yet it is perfectly true that the woman that goes to college is having her sympathies deepened, her interests widened, her character broadened, her resources increased, just as her brother at the college. Surely there is no sphere in life that is not encence. I do not doubt you now. Be at riched by the bringing to it of such quali-

I made such a neat job of it that she was deself on his elbow and stared into the veil- lighted. The two teeth were on a plate, and she wore them to bed the first night she had them. During the night they fell from her mouth to the floor, and when she got up in the morning she trod on them and broke the plate all to pieces. I reset the teeth on another plate, and she went home again with them. That night she put them in a glass of water on the mantel. Her husband got up in the night to get a drink of water and, finding something in the tumbler, threw the contents out of the front window, thus disposing of the second set in three days. Then I made her a third set. These she put on the mantel when she retired and forgot to replace them in the morning. The maid while dusting the room swept these off into the grate underneath the mantel, where they burned up. The family moved out of town a few days afterward, so whether she got a fourth set of teeth I do not know." - Kansas City

For a Bride's Mother.,

It is difficult to find anything in the way of a dress for a bride's mother. A rich silk material is generally selected, and there are certainly very handsome new fabrics of this style this spring. One of the most beautiful is silk granite, a sort of thick grained dull satin, draping well and forming soft, heavy folds. As to the fashion of the dress, a Jacket bodice is more becoming to a rather stout figure than a bolero or cuirass, says the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Another dress for mother is in tan color, made in redingote form, with long train and wide plaits at the sides. The front is open from the collar down, over a plaited underfront of ivory satin crossed with a latticework of black velvet ribbon. The corsage is sharply pointed in front and rounded behind. The tan sleeves enlarge toward the wrists over triple puffs of mousseline de soie over ivory satin. Float Day at Wellesley.

"Float day" is a fete peculiarly Welles-ley's own. The festivities begin at sunset with the coming out of floats decorated and fashioned in quaint design, some-times suggestive of class jokes, sometimes bearing upon the eccentricities of the faculty, sometimes carrying out a theme in history and drama. Smaller craft fol-low the floats until, as twilight deepens, Lake Waban is covered with a gay flotilla, hundreds of colored lights on the boats la, hundreds of colored lights on the boats adding beauty to the scene. On shore scores of lanterns hung in the trees transform the place to a veritable fairyland. The grounds are filled with guests, refreshments are served, fireworks make things brilliant, and then, in the first lull, the Wellesley college songs break out over the moonlit stillness, and "Wellesley, Our Alma Mater," floats over the hills, 800 voices strong.—Cosmopolitan.

O, FOR A HALF HOUR! O, for a half hour in Robbins library! You can hardly imagine, dear reader, how we miss the welcome of those instructive books and magazines. True it is that We had thought when at home in Arlington that we were much in love with Robbins library and that we appreclated her to the full; but now a hundred and twenty-five miles away from this mistress of learning, we are persuaded that we have not loved her half enough, nor appreciated as we ought to have done. "Books, lighthouses in the great sea of time," must be our guide or otherwise we shall be wrecked upon the shallows. Whatever may be true of other departments of life, journalism can never prove itself the instructive power it should prove itself without access to our public libraries. No living man or woman can write well who has not first read well. It is a condition precedent that to say anything one must first have something to say. To feed others, one must first have been fed himself. To become the schoolmaster one must first have graduated as a pupil from the schools. Arlington is especially fortunate in having free access most of it.

JOHN FISKE.

In the death of John Fiske not only this country but the world as well loses one of its most prominent and ripest scholars Harvard university, already distinguished became pre-eminently so through the scholarly life of John Fiske. As a historian John Fiske stood at the very head and front in the world of historical research. But he was also eminent authority upon all questions of philosophy and evolution. He did much to join science and religion hand in hand. Something of a genius, for in his teens he became widely known as a writer, and yet his success over and above others was largely due to his indefatigable spirit of industry. He was not afraid of work, and this the hardest and most persistent. In all his profound research John Fiske evinced an enthusiasm which knew no limits. He ransacked the libraries that he might gain the best thought and experiwith his searching eye. Heeleft nothing undone that could be done for the further establishment of truth. When such a man dies the world is the loser-and yet such man as John Fiske can never die, for he has rightfully earned that immortality which conquers death and the grave. His life adds another star of the first magnitude to our intellectual firmament.

THAT TIN DIPPER. Who of the older persons does not re member that old tin dipper used years always thirsty? Well, we who live in our mountain home are reminded daily of that tin dipper up in "district No. 4." from which we and other happy school boys and giris used to take genuine draughts of nature's beverage, for on our way to the post office, four miles distant, we pass by the roadside a living spring of water, where is a trough for the beast of burden, and alongside of which hangs a tin dipper for men women and children who may pass that way. We never go by this pure, bubbling spring without accepting its melodious invitation "to have a drink." We always fill the old tin dipper which has bung for so many years long side this roadside spring, to its very brim, and then with a heart full of thanksgiving and praise we drain it to the very bottom. And we do not in any instance forget the noble horse who so faithfully takes us each day to the post office with mail for the Enterprise and for individual friends-so with head unchecked our noble animal plunges in nostril deep and drinks in unstinted measure. We are singing this morning in memory of the old tin dipper, and the watering trough along the roadside where man and beast may have their fill. "Help yourself" is always nature's invitation.

THE LAW OF ASSOCIATION.

The law of association has no value only as we give it individuality. The old home, for instance, which we all love so dearly, is only made precious to the memory because it represents the lives of a sainted father and mother, and those of brothers and sisters many of whom have "gone on

QUICK TO RESPOND.

Arlington is always quick to respond to ill that is praiseworthy and generous. The voluntary subscriptions that have been and are now being made for the benefit of Mrs. Cody, the bereaved widow of Garrett J. Cody, and her children. speak volumes for the heart and soul of Arlington. Arlington has always been distinguished for her spirit of "live and let A neighborly feeling pervades the live." whole town. Whatever differences may arise among her people in a religious or blessings brighten as they take their in a political way, these differences are all reduced to the cipher point in times of distress and dire affliction. It is a beau tiful thought that Mrs. Cody and her five children have in this hour of their calamity, the whole town of Arlington back of them, with its deepest sympathy and its most substantial aid. And in all this good and philanthropic work Arlington is to receive by a well-established scriptural law the chiefest blessing. However absurd and contradictory it may seem at first sight yet is it forever true that he who gives will and must receive all the more abundantly. It is a law of all Nature as well as God's eternal decree, that for one to receive he must first give. This life of ours thrives the most on the law of apparent contrasts. He who would find his life must first lose it. Bread scattered upon the waters will return after many days. Our individual lives are so in wrought each with the other that we can not live by ourselves alone. The moment we attempt so to do, we must die. And to Robbins library. Let her make the this is the reason why there are so many dead men walking up and down the earth, simply because they are living by and for themselves alone. God bless Arlington, and may He richly bless Mrs. Cody and those five fatherless children. And all this He will do, for He has promised it.

ARCHBISHOP KEANE IS RIGHT. Archbishop Keane is right when he de lares that the shirtwaist is a cool, com fortable and decent garment, and fit and proper to be worn at church by laymen if they so desire. And now we ask why ome these frequent objections to the shirtwaist? It comes from no other reason than that so many of our immaculate (? humanity stoutly declare that these bodies of ours are vile creations and need to be buried deep in covering so that if possible, no faint outline even of the human form may be seen. We are disgusted and well nigh tired to death of this sham and meaningless talk of these "vile bodies" of ours. There is nothing vile about them. ence of others. He made use of every They came from the hands of an infinite available means which he could hant out creater who is the embodiment of all purity and of all virtue. These bodies of ours are the creations of a divine artist who can in no way make a mistake in symmetry and proportion. There is noth ing so exquisitely delicate and beautiful in the whole world of nature as is the human form, and that man or woman is to be profoundly pitied who cannot look ipon its symmetrical outline with all that admiration which everywhere accomanies the pure and the beautiful. Let us have done with this pretenious underrating of the body. material organization of ours is an ago in the district country school in which important factor in the trinity of the cool, refreshing water was passed to life. We are not all heart nor all soul, nor all body, but we are important parts of each, so that it is quite impossible to ignore or belittle the one without doing infinite injury to the other two. Let us be sensible and so recognize these bodies and let us teach our children this stupen dous and fortunate fact. One may very properly go in a shirtwaist or in his shirt sleeves during the warmer months without doing violence to that virtue which is or should be the pride of men and women everywhere. Let us thank God that we have these bodies of ours, and never let hem, and never in whisperings. That man and woman too need to veil their faces who will hesitate to speak of the human body as of the divinest origin, with the divinest of purposes. We needen't trouble ourselves so much about the shirtwaist, as we do about the wrong and vulgar definition we give to the body. This body of ours has always been misrepresented, and ill-defined from Adam's time to our own day. It is nevertheless one of the trinity of life, and God so ordained it from the beginning. "EARLY CANDLE LIGHT." That good man, the clergyman, used to give out occasionally the following notice or a Sunday when we were a boy in our country home: "There will be an evening meeting in the school house in district No. Services to begin at "early candle light." Now this compound term, "early candlelight," means much to us. In the first place it is pleasantly reminiscent. It points backward to those days when life was characterized by an entire simplicity. It means the home gathering of the family during those long winter evenings, around the domestic fireside. It tells of those earlier years when the country district school was emphatically the poor man's college. "Early candlelight" is in every way eloquent of our intensely home life. How vividly we can now see after all these years the candle early lighted in the homes up and down that country road, shining out a twinkling star from distances more or less remote. In those days the gas and electric light did not illuminate so that all things were revealed at first gave us an added interest in the evening at out upon wall and ceiling many a picture which had about it all the sentiment and poetry of the partially revealed. In those half hidden corners of the sitting room we were in many ways preferable to these later days. Fifty years ago men and women came into more vital touch with one part, while a comfortable competency attracts and makes more nearly a unit of the country neighborhood. "Early candleight" means a democracy where all have equal rights and privileges. We not only for the tallow candle, and so, naturally enough, "early candlelight" has for us its pleasant and inviting attractions. We have come to believe that the verse, There's a light in the window for me,' when rightly translated means the candle lighted and set for the wandering boy. 'Early candle light'" calls us all home.

ARLINGTON IN PERSPECTIVE.

To see any object already clearly defined one must see it in perspective. The whole annot be estimated only as its parts are aken into the reckoning, and by reason of this mathematical fact history alone sets the right value on men and things. Distance is by an inevitable law an important factor in finding the value of the unknown More than a hundred miles from Arlington, as we are at this writing, we can see her more nearly as she is. We have no little love for the town which is our abiding home. We have written over and over again of her delightful situation, of her varied and picturesque scenery, of her excellent schools and churches, of her pleasant homes and of her intelligent and generous people. Arlington is not slow to move in any good ause, and yet there are certain improvenents for which she is yet to provide We have written in previous issues of the Enterprise of the comparative demand for a park or common right in the centre of the town, As now arranged, there is not a single spot of earth at the centre of the town where one may loiter or sit for a moment to take a good long breath, to eny a look about him. True, it is that the stone steps leading into the town hall ere now and then occupied as seats of a ummer evening, but contrary to legal rights and hardly in conformity to that courtesy due the passer by. We have our selves sat upon those stone steps when the vening was coming on, much to the an noyance, we fear, of those passing by. We mention this somewhat unpleasant fact that the necessity for a park may the more clearly be seen. Now the town has the land which it might readily appropriate for this purpose. Why should it longer hesitate to do so? Just consider for a moment what a convenience and a dessing to tired humanity it would prove if men, women and children had such a place as that of which we write to sit furing the oppressive evenings of the heated summer time. Will the town at in early day give the park for which we sk on behalf of all our people!

Another thing that Arlingfon should do, and this at once, is to provide for the safety of those who bathe in Spy pond. No season basses that Spy pond does not daim one or more victims. There have thus far this season been two men drowned in its waters. These lives might ave been saved had the pond been properguarded. But, says the objector, it will st something to do all this. Granted But isn't human life worth the saving? What Arlington should do is this, namely Put during the summer time Spy pond in harge of our police and then appropriate the necessary moneys for the maintenance of a life saving station somewhere along the shores of the pond. There can be no important and urgent. Will the town nake the provision which we suggest and thus save many a life.

tofore to speak more or less frequently of the faithfulness and efficiency of Arlingting and timely that alongside the grave of one of its brave and fallen members we should add an emphatic word to what we have before written. The death risk at which every member of our police force performs his duty. In times of usu al and apparent quiet we give too little thought to the responsible duties in preserving the public peace. The most of fective insurance that Arlington has upon her property and upon individual life comes through the watchful guardianship of her police department. And when we say this we are in no way unmindful of the promptness and efficiency of her fire department. It must be remembered, however, that the police force of our town are continually on the watch that no burglar begins his midnight plundering and that no fire breaks out-so we owe continuously a debt of gratitude to our patrolmen that our homes are for the most part safe from the burglar and the devouring flame. So the thought that we especially desire to underscore is that we are to give great credit to our policemen when all is quiet and peace throughout our town. 'But there is no need why we should discuss the faithfulness and efficiency of our police department, for all Arlington recognizes this fact. What we do, however, urge home upon our townsmen is the re sponsible and hazardous position of every member of our police force. There isn't a man of that force who does not, as did the lamented and brave Garrett J. Cody, take his life in his hand that the safety and the peace of Arlington shall be maintained at whatever cost. The point we desire to make is this, namely: that our police department should be amply paid for its services and that no extra approprtation of money asked by the department for extra services dursight. The dim shadows thrown out in an ing the summer months should be obscure way by the tallow candle always denied. We can but have in mind that negative vote given by Arlinghome. By its light we were able to trace ton at the town meeting in March when the extra sum of three hundred dollars or thereabouts was asked for by the selectmen through and by the expressed wish of the police department for the purpose could let our imagination play at will. At of more efficiently guarding the interests the imminent risk of being called an old or Arlington Heights of a Sunday during fogy, we do insist that the older times the heavy summer travel on that day. Now that negative and unaccountable vote came about, not that Arlington is miserly and penurious in its grasp to save like other towns, forgetful or paying but true that "he who goes a borrowing goes of police official life so long as things go a sorrowing," provided the borrowing is on comparatively well. In times of quiet we are too apt to conclude in a thoughtless way that the police force has little or nothing to do, when as a matter of neighbor. Friends, and real friends, too, fact that very quiet is largely owing to have been made enemies by this borrow- the watchful care of our patrolmen. When some official in the performance of his duty ther is always a bond of friendship. But gives up his life for our individual wellin these days of greater wealth men and being, as did Garrett J. Cody, then for vomen have become so independent that the time being at least, we become awake comparatively in a large way they neither to the fact that faithful service in behalf of life and property should be abundantly rewarded. We'll venture that that paltry Great wealth has the tendency to drive sum of three hundred dollars would today be voted the police department without discussion and without a dissenting vote. Why is it that we wait until the grave shall claim its victim in official life before we recognize in a substantial way not only have a profound respect, but lots of love his services, but his every wish as well, concerning the further efficiency of his department? Again does the Enterprise urge upon Arlington the duty as well as privilege of generously meeting every wish and requirement of her police force.

MORE IMPROVEMENTS.

The Lexington & Boston Street Rail ay company is making numerous im-covements for the betterment of its sercice. Among some of them now in prog-ess is the double tracking of the road from the Arlington Heights terminus to the Lexington line and the construction two storage battery power stations ne at Concord, the other at Billerica one at Concord, the other at Directione at Concord, the effect of equalizing the power at the ends of the lines and relieve the eligines and dynamos at the central station of great strain, established the central station of great strain and central station of great strain stations are considered to the central station of great strain stations are considered to the central station of great strain stations are considered to the central station of great strain stations are considered to the central station of great strain strain station of great strain station of great strain station of great strain station of great strain station station station station strain station sta pecially when several cars are climbing hills. Nearly all of the turnouts are now equipped with block signals and telephones. All the new cars have been equipped with air brakes and the road can justly boast of as fine rolling stock as any road in the state. While whe service in the past has not been all that could be desired, it would seem by these improvements that the company is sparing no expense to make it satisfactory. A new car stable north of their station and power house at North Lexington is soon to be creeted, which would indicate that the present one is madequate to accommodate all the cars 'the company proposes to own for its several branches. COL. BENTON'S GIFT.

Last Monday evening Belmont lodge, F. and A. C. Benton to be presented to Guildhall, the town of his birth. party arrived in Lancaster at 7.30 on the morning of the 9th and proceeded to Guildhall directly after breakfasting at the Lancaster House. They were met at Guildhall by a committee of the local Masonic fraternity and were very cordially welcomed.

The Grand Lodge of Vermont assembled at the court house and officially met the Belmont lodge, which had already welcomed the visiting Masons. They then formed into a line of march and proceeded to the Masonic hall, headed by the American Waltham Watch Co. band. More than 400 Masons were present at the dedication and participated in performing the elaborate ritualistic service of the Masonic craft. The exercises were very imposing.

Public exercises were held in the Congregational church later in the afternoon and the following gentlemen addressed the assembly, which was made up of townspeople as well as Masons Charles R. Montague, grand master of Vermont: Charles T. Gallagher, grand of Massachusetts; Henry O. Kent of Lancaster, N. H., the Hon. S. C. Lawrence of Medford, Mass.; Gen. Curtis Guild, Jr. of Boston, Mass., the Hon. David L. Pennington representing he grand lodge of Massachusetts, Hon. A. Folsom of Boston, and the Hon. Ira Clark of New Hampshire.

Early in the evening the first meeting was held in the Masonic hall, Most Worshipful W. Scott Nay, past grand master of Vermont, officiating, and the officers of Belmont lodge 88, were installed. A band concert was furnished later on the grounds of the Methodist church, which was enjoyed by fully 2000 people.

The majority of the Masons, including lodge, left Guildhall early Wednesday morning for Fabyan and enjoyed the day in viewing the White Mountains.

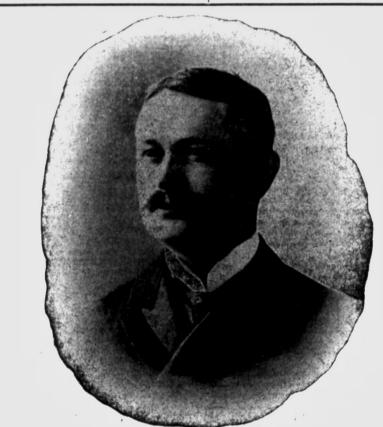

The presentation of the keys of the public library to the town officers of Guildhall was made at 10 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, after which a collation and public exercises were held in the Congregational church. The principal address was made by Prof. Walter N. Ranger, superintendent of education in Vermont. A fireworks display in the evening ended the program.

The party arrived in Boston at 7.30 a. m., Thursday, and the Belmont lodge proceeded at once to Belmont, where they closed the lodge according to the Masonic ritual.

Among the Belmont people who went to Guildhall were: Worshipful Master Irving B. Frost, Joseph H. Cullis, D. S. McCabe, Frank D. Chant, R. C. Haskins, E. Allen Pierce, E. A. Castner, Geo. M. Rogers, J. M. Baldwin, H. H. Russell, Fred E. Poor, Thomas L. Cree-Flett, M. H. ley, C. H. Slade, Geo. C. Pierce and Chas. A. Houlahan, all Belmont, together with Geo. E. Smith, W. G. Colburn, J. S. Blake, Benjamin Taft. Arthur W. Burke. Curtis Guild. Jr., Herbert M. Cragg, Henry M. Fisher, T. T. Ferguson, G. W. Sampson, Louis A. Wallon, Clifford S. Cobb, John E. Cobb, James A. Bailey, E. A. Houghton, C. H. Wheeler, H. S. Milton, and A. L. Richardson.

A Boston paper pays the following tribute to our most esteemed citizen:

Col. Everett C. Benton is an example of what a young man may become who attends to business with energy and cess in whatever he has undertaken. He was an enthusiastic worker for the Republican party, and saw Gov. Greenhalge elected as one of the results; he served as an officer on that governor's staff with dignity; he was one of the council who helped Gov. Wolcott make his administration strong; and he is now one of the firm of John C. Paige & Company, a reward which came to him for his faithful work in a more humble capacity. His home town has every reason to be proud of him as well as to be grateful for his kindness.

the home of her daughter July 4, of heat prostration at 60 years of age. Mrs. Graham moved to Belmont from Boston in search of health, but for the past four years ber health has been declining and her poor health together with the high temperature was more than she could endure. The funeral services were held at her daughter's residence Sunday at 2.30 o'clock. The Rev. Dr. R. H. Coe of the Belmont Episcopal church and Rev. Dr. George Prescott of the Church of the Good Shepherd, where Mrs. Graham formerly attended, officiated. A number of selections were rendered by the Ruggles street quartette of Boston. The interment was in Cambridge cemetery.

A special meeting of the Belmont Congregational society will be on Monday at 7.30 p.m., in the church. The warrant reads: lst, to choose a moderator for said meeting. 2d, to receive a communication from the parish committee elected at the annual meeting and to act thereon. 3d, to take such action in relation from the parish committee as may be necessary. The condition

The condition of ex-Congressman sprague, who has for some time been confined in the McLean hospital, has been greatly improved of late. He was transferred to the Butler hospital in Providence several days ago.

Mr. Edward Parker Deacon died of pare-is at the McLean hospital last Friday evening. Otis D. Andrews, of Waverley, who is confined in Waltham hospital with ap-pendicitis, shows marked signs of imrovement. Mrs. Agnes M. Cotter, of Waverley, has applied for a permit to build a two-family wooden dwelling house on White near Beach street. Melansen Bros, are named as the mechanics.

Alfred K. Von Arnim and Miss Annie Ingraham Eldridge, both of Brookline, were married in the All Saints Episcopal church by the Rev. Dr. Coe, at high noon, Wednesday, Following the wedding a breakfast was held at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Gilbert Payson, on Belmont street.

Last Saturday the Belmont baseball team won an easy victory over the Waverley boys, defeating them by a score of 8 to 4.

H. D. Rogers is building a pavilion for band concerts and dancing on the vacant lot beside his store. When finished it will applied for a permit to build a two-family wooden dwelling house on White near Beach street. Melansen Bros, are named as the mechanics.

Miss Ryan, of Trapelo road, who has for the past two weeks been confined in Waltham hospital, has recovered and was able to return to her home Wednesday. Mrs. Ryan is still at the hospital and is steadily improving.

There is now going on in Lexington an experiment which may prove so successful, and so suggestive, that its effects may be far-reaching than anything now dreamed of by those who have inaugurated it. Denominational feeling is strong in church going circles, but is not this sectarian narrowness one of the causes for the indifference to all religion, against which the clergy cry out? The average man, moral, well meaning, kindly disposed, sees some of his neighbors going to one church, some to another; he knows them as equally good neighbors and citizens. Why should he take sides? Will he not say, "A plague on both your houses," and satisfy himself with keeping out of both, while keeping friends with the members of both? This is the day of combination; all industries are manufacturing establishments, prises; everywhere a union of forces. It is in the interests of economy, of efficiency, of power. A Bit Unreal, But Much Enjoyed at North Lexington Lawn Party.

North Lexington Lawn Party.

The grounds surrounding the house of Mrs. Olive J. Smith, of North Lexington, were brilliantly lighted Monday evening with Chinese lanterns and locomotive headlights, the occasion being a lawn party given by George F. Smith and Miss Minerva Smith. There were other pleasing decorations, and especially indoors. Refreshments were served from a tent and young ladles did the serving. Among the novel features was an art room where might be seen all the artistic wonders of the world. The wonders were varied, among them being a wreck which happened to be an old umbrella, a peep into China which was a tea cuptrue blue was a bottle of bluing, and a look at Long Branch chanced to be the branch of a tree. There were many others equally interesting and amusing. There was music by an orchestra, and singing by the company. George E. Bowers gave an entertaining monologue, and there were recitations by Mrs. John Bull Emery, besides various other numbers on the program, Many were present from out of town.

Among those in attendance from Lexington and North Lexington were: Miss Annie Lawrence, Miss Ruth Brigham, Mr. Charles Glass, Mr. Alvan Brown, Miss Harriet Cushing, Mr. Riley, Miss Minerva Smith, Mr. Walter Anderson, Miss Harriet Cushing, Mr. Riley, Miss Minerva Smith, Mr. Walter Anderson, Miss Harriet Cushing, Mr. Riley, Miss Minerva Smith, Mr. Walter Anderson, Miss Harriet Cushing, Mr. Riley, Miss Minerva Smith, Mr. Walter Anderson, Miss Harriet Cushing, Mr. Riley, Miss Minerva Smith, Mr. Walter Anderson, Miss Harriet Cushing, Mr. Riley, Miss Minerva Smith, Mr. Walter Anderson, Miss Bertha Whitaker, Mr. John Hamilton, Mr. Chester Lawrence, Mr. Edward Hallaway, Mr. Leslie Butterfield, Mr. Albert Hippler, Miss Corinne Locke, Mr. Walter Hagan, Miss Corinne Locke, Mr. Walter Hagan, Miss Rose Whitney, Mr. Ralph Whitney, Mr. Jesse Brown, Miss Lillian Hamilton.

North Lexington.

North Lexington people are becoming somewhat interested in a project of holding divine services in this section of the town, and it is likely the school committee will be requested to give the use of the Tidd schoolhouse, Sundays, for the purpose. The location of the building on Hancock street would accommodate all persons in this locality. Rev. H. H. Hamilton readily consented to the proposition when asked if he would be willing to lead the meetings if they could be held at the schoolhouse. There are children enough here to form a good-sized Sunday school, and it is believed if the school committee will grant the use of the building for a place of meeting there will be no trouble in getting good-sized congregations.

Lexington was well represented at the 25th anniversary of the Appalachian Mountain club, at Jackson, N. H., last week. Hon Augustus E. Scott and Albert S. Parsons, both expresidents of the club, were present and made addresses at the anniversary exercises. Mr. Scott gave an account of his early explorations, with other members of the club, in the White Mountain region twenty odd years ago, when it was comparatively an unknown land. He especially described the trying trip made over the Twin Mountain range, in which other Lexington people joined. Dear Enterprise:—Didn't we give you an enthuslastic welcome on Monday evening is you came to us from Arilington just training the manager of yours must have made its pen ply with lightning speed in making up your last issue. But then, dear Enterprise, you are always filled to the brim, and to read your paper "doeth good like i medicine." You have set us on our feet gain, so to return your favor I'll go cheerfully on with our informal story of these again, so to return your favor we go theerfully on with our informal story of these mountains with their everlasting silences.

Lexington was well represented to the property of the Aphalechia Month of the Control of the Con olden times, and watched the shadows come and go upon the wall. To get the ful benefit of the shadowy light of the open fire, you must leave the lamps unlighted. We can understand, partially at least, how like Marvel came to write his "Reverles of a Bachelor" before the open fire, for even at our age alongside the old fireplace of an evening, with the embers all aglow, we live over our youth again, and think not only kindly but lovingly of the pretty girl who was in our class in the district school. O, the old fireplace of our fathers' day! It has about it all the sentiment and poetry of that early, simpler life so characteristic of the generations gone before. We are at present, while the cloud is on, singing the praises of our broad, generous fireplace at Kinderheim.

North Lexington Boy Writes of Wonders in the Philippines — Natives Live High on One Cocoanut a Day.

Mrs. W. L. Burrill of North Lexingon has received this interesting letterfrom her son in the Philippines: Zamboanga, 'May 26.

No doubt every one has read the description in the papers of the Vicksburg's co-operation in the capture of Aguinaldo. Well, you may have some more news about us in the papers in the course of a few months. We have been detailed to go up and capture an island by the name of Palawan. It lies right near the island of Bosnel, and the natives are death on Americans. There was a peace commission sent up there some time ago, but they wouldn't let them land, so now we are going up there tomorrow to establish a military station at the principal port on the island; it is called Porta Prince.

I expect we shall have quite a lively time, as they swear they will never give in to us. The captain was making his inspection rounds today and was looking at some of the four inch guns, and he said, "Well, boys, we shall have a chance to use these before long." It has been reported that the natives have got some Krupp guns up there and plenty of ammunition. The gunboat Samar came in today and reported as having had a fight with about 600 natives. They shelled the town and made a landing party and burned the town and captured two brass one-pound cannon. Some of the boys are aboard visiting us tonight, and they say it is a warm place up there. We are taking Brig.-Gen. Corby along with us and a company of soldiers. We will shell the town, and the soldiers in our batallion will make a landing.

The natives can live on one cocoanut a day and can stand great endurance. They live chiefly on the natural products of the country. These islands are very pretty. I think it is the wildest scenery I have ever seen. The places are very mountainous and there are heavy F. E. DOWNER, growths of trees down to the water's edge, which are all hard wood. Here soft wood is unknown. Everything is made OPP. P. O.

out of hard. Some of it is as hard a iron and when thrown in the water will sink like a stone. Some of the natives make anchors for their Boats out of it.

An Incident of Logging Camp Life In the Sierra Nevada.

By JOHN HAMMOND HAMLIN.

Scattered throughout the Sierra Nevada mountains are numerous sawmills, which are making extensive inroads upon the magnificent tracts of timber land. The chain of mountains abounds in picturesque scenes, evergreen trees, gigantic and medium sized, and fuzzy little thickets of diminutive saplings clothe the en-tire range, barring the bald, snow capped peaks and the acres cleared by the hand

The State Line sawmills are perhaps as well known as any other on the Truckee river, a stream that runs a dozen or more like institutions along the eastern slopes of the sierras. For a matter of convenience the site of the State Line mills is situated on the banks of the Truckee and within a few hundred feet of the Southern Pacific railway, insuring an abundance of water power and a ready means of shipping lumber. But the logging camp is perched way up near the snow line, and access to it is impos-sible by vehicle on account of the steep, broken contour of the mountainous district. Of course it is very essential that the logging camp be kept well supplied with provisions, and, as there are never fewer than 30 hearty and vigorous men employed at their various tasks preparing the virgin forests for the saw, you can imagine what a quantity of food is required to keep the larder well stocked.

The mode of conveying all kinds of supplies to the airly located camp is by a train of seven pack mules-small, wiry creatures that are strong and agile and quite capable of carrying a burden equal to their own weight up the arduous mountain trail that coils in a tortuous fashion from the mill up the high mountains to the rough log cabins which constituted the loggers' domain. A sight long to be remembered are these donkeys, laden with cumbersome pack saddles, piled high with miscellaneous goods, carefully picking their way up the dizzy trail. wonder that such tiny creatures can stag-ger under the loads, let alone their climbing an almost perpendicular ascent.

It is no easy thing to pilot a train of He catchee me!" mules up a narrow mountain trail. They cannot be hurried out of a slow, slow walk, frequently coming to a halt and occasionally lying down in the middle of the trail. This last act is exceedingly aggravating, as the pack has to be removed before the donkey can arise again. With all the trials and tribulations connected thereto French Joe got along splendidly as muleteer of the State Line pack train-a big, cheerful man, with a deep, sonorous voice that each individual donkey had grown to understand. His "Hello, Jinny!" rang out like a rich toned bell and urged on the mules when a lash would not have availed in the least.

Every day the trip had to be made. Besides the provisions for the men, there were 20 head of oxen and as many horses to be supplied with provender. One day the superintendent of the logging camp, while down on a visit to the mills, happened to observe a drove of pigs rooting about the boarding house. He suggested to his employers that it would be an excellent idea to have a few of them up at camp, as there was plenty of refuser from the tables to keep them fat and his men would appreciate fresh pork now and then. The mill owners agreed with him, and so begins the real motive of this tale.

It was next to impossible to drive pigs along a wide, level roadway. It was utterly impossible to drive them up the mule trail. How, then, could these ten fat young porkers, weighing from 50 to 75 pounds each, be transported from their present field to the logging camp? The men gave it up as an unsolved riddle. Just then French Joe's voice sang out a loud "Holloa, Jinny!" and the superintendent exclaimed: "The pack mules! That's the thing. Box the pigs up and load 'em on Joe's donkeys. What could be simpler?" Easily said, but the weary corps of men that caught and boxed those slippery, noisy shotes declared that it was the hardest day's work they ever experi-enced. French Joe wore a look of dis-gust. "Morbleu! I nevair before see ze pig packed se mule on. Nevair, by gar!"

Nevertheless the crated porkers were hoisted upon the pack saddles, two for each mule. Barring an occasional grunt or a faint squeal, the pigs, tired out after their valiant struggles against capture, gave no signs of displeasure at their peculiar position. The funny little donkeys, accustomed to burdens varying from fresh meat to cord wood, seemed quite in-different to the oddness of their live

French Joe's good natured smile wreathed his broad face once more as he wreathed his broad face once more as he beheld the comical array of pig laden mules. "It ees verra funny, zis ting, but it ees again like what I nevair see before. Ze mule will not pleased be if ze pig squeal in ze ears."

The afternoon was well advanced when Joe sang out his "Holloa, Jinny! Come, Cayuse!" which started the mule train on its difficult climb up the mountain trail. The trail zigzags beneath towering pines up a very steep slope, then it winds along a canyon for a mile, ascends another pitch and finally traverses a press.

broad, wooded plateau, comparatively level, at the extreme end of which, on slight rise, is the logging camp. French Joe always, rode in the wake of the train on a mouse colored donkey. The narrowness of the trail prevented him from passing the burdened animals, so he had to content himself with shouting vociferously at the mules as they slowly moved over their daily route. In spite of all his precautions one beast calmly laid down at the steepest part of the first pitch. Joe was compelled to remove the pig freight and clumsy pack saddle before the erring mule could regain an upright position. In the first place the train had started late. This delay and the uncommon deliberateness of the whole string of mules consumed a great deal more time. Joe's stock of patience began to ebb. His ready tongue poured forth a surprising mixture of French and English interjections as the twilight threw gloomy shadows throughout the silent forest. the lead mule topped the final declivity and passed beneath the great pines which studded the plateau, it was quite dark. Now Joe thought it ample time to use other means than his voice to urge the slothful donkeys onward, so he alighted from his riding animal, gathered a pocketful of rocks and mounted again. had practiced this method before and > had its effect. The very first stone he threw crashed through the slats of one of the pig boxes, and its effect was indeed telling. All the way up the consignment of swine had emitted scarcely a grunt, and such a piercing squeal, coming so suddenly from the stricken pig, electrified the staid donkey upon whose back he was strapped.

The mule snorted hoarsely. He jumped forward against the one in front of The pig squealed again-a terrific, him. maddened squeal, that did not die away, but grew more ear splitting than at first. Every mule in that heretofore snail-like train pricked up its long ears. Those selfsame ears must have gathered in a great volume of that horrid din, for the lead donkey struck out on a lumbering trot, closely followed by the other thoroughly alarmed beasts.

Towering pines bordered the trail; pack saddle came in contact with a big tree trunk; another shrill scream joined in with the first. The jolting, swaying boxes, with their lusty lunged inmates, fairly shrieked, and the faster the mules ambled the more deafening waxed the dim old woods. What unearthly cries dispelled their wonted quietude!

Summer was in progress in the long, low boarding house at the logging camp. Two rows of tired, hungry men were busily making wonderful inroads upon China Tom's well cooked viands. low candles shed a dim light upon the ruddy faces of the "crew."

"Now, Mike, you know there's no such thing as fairies or banshees. So what do you spin a yarn like that for?"

"Oi sweer me grandfather hearn wan, an didn't he tell me the truth, now, whin

he says he did?" An animated conversation ensued. The men dearly loved to hear Mike rant about his queer superstitions and argued with him simply for that reason. In the heat of the discussion China Tom appeared at the door which opened into the kitchen. He carried a dish of smoking suet pudding in either hand. The Mongolian seemed uneasy; he hesitated and looked back over his shoulder. Some of the men noticed that his whole form shook violent-Before they had time to say a word the Chinaman let both dishes fall with a crash, his almond eyes glittered wildly, and he made a frantie dash for the door. His cue sailed out behind him in a straight line, and as he disappeared the men heard a gasping "Him debbil, sure!

some one. Through the chinks of the logs came a strange sound. Every man heard it. A chorus of discordant screams broke sharply on their ears. It grew louder, louder. A frightful calamity seemed impending. The main volume split up. A piercing shriek, apparently borne on wings, cir-cled about the cabin. Another uncanny ery rent the air from the direction of the stables. The woods were full of screeching, screaming noises.

"Catamounts!" yelled a burly logger.
"Mary, mither! Save me sow!! I the banshee! Och, it's the banshee!"

The banshee! Did it not tally with Mike's vivid description of skurrying, whistling winds, of terrorizing cries, of dire premonitions?

Mike fell upon his knees, praying audibly and rapidly. No one directed a single jeering remark toward the praying Irishman. The crew's jesting mood had vanished. They knew not what explanation to offer in regard to these unnatural

A clatter of hoofs dashed up to the cabin, a heavy body threw itself against the latched door, broke through and a huge man stood before them. "Ah, morbleu! It ees one verra big meestake, zis ting. I know.'

"Joe, holy smoke! Man, what have you been doing?" shouted the superintendent.

"Ze pigs zat m'sieur wished that I bring up are arrived, and zey squeal in ze mule's ear, and ze mule he run away."
"Ran away with the pigs! Where are they now?"

"Oh, m'sieur, it ees not easy to say! It ees verra necessaire for us all to go look."

A relieved laugh resounded through the candle lit dining room. Mike arose sheepishly from his knees.

In a short time lanterns were twinkling midst the forest aisles-here, there, everywhere. The men had no difficulty in locating the strangely burdened mules, for spasmodic squeals still echoed through the woods. When the seven donkeys were corralled, it was found that three or four boxes had burst open, liberating the pigs. The men made merry as the remainder of Joe's freight was turned loose h an unoccupied stable.

As the superintendent suggested, the loggers fully appreciated the fresh pork now and then. China Tom served it out to them in many different styles, and to give zest to their hearty meals they de-lighted in dubbing the crisp, brown roasts, savory stews and spareribs "bak-ed banshees," "stewed catamounts" and "broiled debbils."—Argonaut.

WHAT FISH EAT.

Most Demisens of the Deep Live on Animal Substances. There are many thousand species of fishes, and naturally there is a great diversity in their food. Nevertheless, it is possible to divide it into seven distinct, Now, all the animal life rests on a foundation of vegetables. Plants store up the vital forces in the air and sunshine and pass them on to the great army of vegetarians, who in their turn yield them up to the animals which live on One or two additional steps may sometimes be interposed, but the result is the same. A caterpillar eats a cabbage, an ishneumon fly quarters her brood on the caterpillar, an insect eating bird snaps up the fly, and a bird of prey pounces upon the fly catcher and finishes the story. The inevitable order is plant, vegetarian, flesh eater.

The vast majority of fishes feed on fishes or other animals found in the sea. Probably, however, the vegetarians are more numerous than are generally supposed. For instance, all the textbooks declare that a gray mullet feeds on the living matter obtained by straining sand or mud in its mouth, which doubtless is true, but they ought to explain that owing to the peculiar construction of its throat larger bodies are prevented from passing into the stomach, which is not true. No amount of letterpress will persuade a Land's End fisherman that a gray mullet cannot or does not eat seaweed. He is convinced from a lifelong observation of its habits that it does, and the fact that the fish's stomach is often found full of seaweed proves that the fisherman is right. Fishes which undoubtedly catch and swallow living prey are wont on occasion to treat themselves to a dish of case of the case of t Land's End fisherman that a gray mullet cannot or does not eat seaweed. He is casion to treat themselves to a dish of vegetables. I assisted at the post mortem examination of a bream which contained, in addition to a crab, large helpings of two kinds of seaweed in different stages of digestion.

But doubtless it is a fact that fishes live for the most part on animal diet, and it is obvious that this must consist largely of some other class than their own. If fishes ate fishes only, the race would soon become extinct. Fortunately the sea is full of life, and for those which cannot or will not eat seawerd there are worms innumerable, jellyfishes, starfishes and sea urchins, the great host living in shells, sea urchins, the great host living in shells, from the oyster to the periwinkle and the limpet, crabs and all other kindred, and lastly other fishes. The appetite must be capricious indeed which cannot find some thing to tempt it among all this vast array .- Newport News-Herald,

Photographing Closed Pages.

Library rules ordinarily forbid the removal of valuable books and engravings from the premises, so that there is trouble in obtaining photographic copies of pictures or plates, the introduction of artificial light or even of a camera being commonly prohibited. A method of getting over this difficulty which has been tried recently with success is to coat a piece of cardboard with a phosphorescent substance and, after sufficient exposure to the sun, place it at the back of the picture to be reproduced. Then (supposing that the picture is in a book) a dry plate is put against the face of it, and the volume is closed. This can be managed very easily by manipulating the dry plate under a cloth that covers the book.

The dry plate is allowed to remain from 18 to 60 minutes, according to the nature and thickness of the paper. Then it is withdrawn, under the cloth as before, and put into a dark box for subsequent development. It is stated by the inventor of this process that if films are used instead of dry plates a large number of 943 Mass. ave., Arlington copies of different engravings in the same ook may be made at the same time.-Saturday Evening Post.

The Trouble.

The naturalist's wife had gone out for a few moments and left the baby in charge of her absentminded husband. When she returned, she was not a little disturbed to discover the baby crying dismally and its father with a collection of his largest bottles of alcohol before him, evidently at his wits' end.
"Why, David, David!" cried the good woman, snatching up the child. "Whatver is the matter?"

"Well, my dear," responded the great naturalist simply, still gazing at the baby, "it's very strange, but I can't find a bottle large enough to hold him any-where."—Town and Country.

The "Feelings" of Metals. Can metals feel? At the Royal institution in London Professor Jagadis Chunder Bose proved that they can, in much the same way as animal beings. He struck a piece of copper, pinched a piece of zinc, gave it poison and adminis-tered an antidote and threw light upon an artificial retina. In each case the electrical emotion, as registered by the galvanometer, was painful to witness. There is an openin; for a society for the pre-vention of cruelty to metals.

The House With Six Doors. The northernmost point of Scotland is often spoken of as John O'Groat's, and there is a curious story as to how it got its name. Several hundred years ago John O'Groat took his family and settled in that place, building his house on the very tip of the rocky promontory that overlooks the Atlantic ocean northeast toward Norway. John O'Groat had an interesting family of six stalwart sons, but harmony did not dwell among them. From all accounts they were very troublesome sons indeed, and things reached such a pass finally that not one of the boys would speak to any of the others. Each one was afraid the others would get ahead of him, and each refused to enter the house unless he could go in at the door ahead of all his brothers. The old father at last hit upon a happy plan. He had six doors made in his house, one for each of his sons, so that none could have any fear that he was getting the worst of it. But there was trouble at the dinner table, too, for every one of those quarrelsome sons was determined to sit at the head of the table. So the old father had a perfectly round table made, and every one was just as far from the center as every one else. It is not known whether John O'Groat managed to keep peace in his family or not, but the story gave a name to the rocky promontory. Robert Burns, the famous Scottish poet, says:

Hear, land o' cakes an brither Scots, Frae Maidenkirk to John O'Groat's, If there's a hole in ae your coats,
I' faith ye'll prent it.

▲ chiel's amang ye, takin notes, I rede, ye'll tent it.

Riddles.

The ancients believed that the monster sphinx was the inventor of riddles. The one she proposed for solution was this: "What animal is that which goes upon four legs in the morning, upon two at noon and upon three at night?" Many persons strove to explain it, but failed and were torn to pieces by her. At length Œdipus, the son of Laius, king of Thebes, solved it by saying that the animal was man, who in the infancy or morning of his life creeps upon his hands and feet and so goes on all fours; in the noon of his life walks on two feet, and in the waning evening and night of old age requires a stick and so totters upon three legs. The sphinx, enraged at the discovery of her riddle, threw herself from a rock and died.

Such is the fabled history of the first riddle. The true is not known, as riddles are of remote antiquity, but we find from Plutarch and in his days the Greek girls often amused themselves with proposing them for their companions to unravel. For a party of merry people clustered round a cheerful flickering fire no amusement is better calculated than a batch of enigmas and riddles, as they possess enough point to rivet the attention of all as to their probable meaning and sufficient humor to provoke many a hearty laugh.

FALLEN FLOWERS.

One of the workers of the world, Living, tofled and, tolling, died, But others worked, and the world went on And was not changed when he was gone; A strong arm stricken, a wide sail furled, And only a few men sighed.

One of the heroes of the world

Fought to conquer, then fought to full

And fell down slain to his blood stained mail, And over his form they slept; His cause was lost and his banner furled,

One of the singers among mankind Sang healing songs from an o'erwrought heart But ere men listened the grace and wind
Were wasting the rest unsung like a wave,
And now of his fame that will ne'er depart He has never heard in his grove.

One of the women who only love Loved and grieved and faded away Ah me! Are these gone to the God above?
What more of each can I say?
They are human flowers that flower and fall.
This is the song and the end of them aft.
—Arthur O'Shaughnessy.

BIG WORDS.

Sometimes They Come Handy to Those Who Know Them.

"I do not like big words as a usual thing, but occasionally they are a great convenience, for they are great savers of space and time," remarked a gentleman who occasionally breaks into a magazine with a heavy weight. "By multiplying the prefixes or sandwiching in the fraction of the root of some word here and there a combination can be arranged that will convey in a single word and at a single glance an idea that ordinarily it would take a multiplicity of words to convey. For this reason medical jurisprudence and scientific literature generally are rich with what is regarded as a rare and extraordinary vocabulary.

"Yet there are but few words used in any of the branches of science which a mere novice in language could not understand if he would but analyze the combination and think for a moment of the derivative fragments which are to be found. Sometimes the word may string out over half a line in an ordinary newspaper column, but an examination of it will show that, even independent of the context, one may easily understand it if one will but reflect for a moment upon the fragments of other simpler words which are preserved in the combination.

I had an amazing experience once with a big word, and incidentally the use of it profited me in a small way. I had blazed out on the negro problem, and in a discussion of the mental status of the negro I had occasion to refer to the popular belief among negroes in a material heaven and urged in my contention that the negro race was a primitive race; that even his conception of a deity had not yet undergone the processes of deanthropomorphization. The word struck me because of its convenience and expressiveness, conveying as it does an idea that could scarcely be conveyed by anything less than a dozen words.

"There was a lean, cadaverous bill collector who walked in my shadow on pay day. He walked into the office, with a copy of my article in his hand. 'Excuse me,' he said, 'but me and my wife read your article on the negro question, and, being southerners, we indorse all you But there is one thing about it,' he continued timidly, 'which we do not understand, and since we have failed to find the word in the dictionary I thought I would ask you what it meant.'

"I did not know exactly what he was driving at and thought at first he was joking me. He pointed out the word 'deanthropomorphization.' I picked it to pieces for him in sections, and he smiled blandly and in his embarrassment forgot to present the bill which he had been trying to collect, and never after that did

"But it taught me a more serious lesson, for I honestly believe that whatever merit there was in my article was lost on that couple because of the intense interest and curious concern which centered in the word which they did not under-stand. I have not used the word since, and, while it may be a convenience in literary construction, I believe I would rather spell the idea out in smaller characters."-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Two Unusual Epitaphs.

A Charleston churchyard contains the dust of many eminent men and several queer epitaphs. The tombstone of Mary Ann Luyten is a cedar bedstead that has stood the ravages of 181 years. The epitaph of Charlotte Elford, who died on May 9, 1817, says that

In Childhood, Obedient. In Wedlock, In Prosperity, Virtuous. Humble. Resigned. Patient. In Adversity, In Death, Нарру.

Another curious one is that of John Singleton, who died Sept. 10, 1789: Sacred and solemn Lilacs Are Imported.

The common lilac, which is known to botanists as Syringa vulgaris, has been in cultivation for over 800 years, and its native home is said to be on the mountainous regions of central Europe, from Piedmont to Hungary, whence it was introduced to cultivation in 1597.

Botanists recognize about 12 species of lilacs, found in a wild state, and these are native from southwestern Europe through central Asia and the Himalayas to Mongolia, northern China and Japan. None of the species is a native of the American continent.

Their Difference.

One day when he was in Cambridge the late Bishop Mandell Creighton was asked if he could state the difference be-tween an Oxford man and a Cambridge

The professor, as he then was, immediately replied, "An Oxford man looks as if the world belonged to him, a Cambridge man as if he didn't care to whom the world belonged."

WOMAN AND HOME.

A CALIFORNIA WOMAN WHO IS PRESI-DENT OF A RAILROAD.

They Lack Perception-How to Clean Old Clothes - Saying Disagreeable Things-Dry Heat to Relieve Pain. Women In Economics.

Mrs. John F. Kidder of Grass Valley, Cal., is president of a railroad, and she has the distinction of being one of the very few women, if not the only one, who ever held such a bona fide position and

She was chosen as the successor of her deceased husband, John Flint Kidder, whose death left practically the sole ownership and the management in her hands For nearly a year previous to Mr. Kidder's death his wife was going through the process of familiarizing herself with the business affairs of the company simply because his failing health made it imperative that some trusted representative should answer the questions of subordinates, look after details and give advice and counsel.

Mrs. Kidder is not the sort of a woman who desires to taste the duties and responsibilities that usually fall to men

MRS. JOHN F. KIDDER.

She simply is the principal owner of this railroad property, and, wishing to have it managed in a certain way, she pro-

In her home life Mrs. Kidder conducts a household that is the ideal of hospitality. The house is elegantly furnished and is a mansion in size and costliness, yet there is not a miner or railroad employee so humble that he does not receive the same cordial welcome at the threshold that is accorded to the most fashionable and wealthy callers. The Kidder home is also placed at the disposal of the distinguished men and women of the day who happen to come to Grass Valley to view the mines of the historic/little city.

Like her husband, when he was living, there is but one thing in which Mrs. Kidder takes more pride than in the Nevada County Narrow Gauge railroad, and that is in the home over which she presides She says it is a fine place and a pleasant home, and she wants all her friends to share her enjoyment of it. Mrs. Kidder's sole companion is her adopted daughter, Miss Beatrice Kidder, whom she loves and cares for as tenderly as ever did a mother for her own. Mrs. Kidder says she does not see how she is going to pass the time while her daughter is finishing her education, and the only solution she can think of is to busy her self the more in her manifold daily duties. Mrs. Kidder's railroad is only 23 miles long, but it cost $650,000. It runs from Colfax, on the Central Pacific, through Grass Valley to Nevada City. It runs ing relief to a patient suffering from four passenger trains each way daily and neuralgia, rheumatism, bowel complaints a couple of freight trains. As the population of the two principal towns is about 8,000 and 6,000 respectively, it may be well understood how well the road prospers in a business way.

They Lack Perception. Want of perception is the rock upon which many carefully constructed plans go to pieces. A nicely adjusted discrimination as to "what is what" is invaluable in every walk of life, but particularly is it essential to social aspirants, to whom it is just the quality above all others that will insure their success. It is very odd how many people seem totally lacking in such perception. They will choose the wrong people as acquaintances and, despite their anxiety to do the right thing, will provoke criticism by doing precisely the wrong one. This quality must either be inborn or acquired by long association and early education. It is quite hopeless for an adult who has neither ability to see wherein he lacks or to avoid the pitfalls which are already spread for the unwary. Perception and tact are quite different, although they are nearly allied. It goes without saying that a tactful person has perception; he could not be tactful without it. But perception does not always imply tact. It is simply a knowledge of cause and effect, says the New York Tribune. How that knowledge is to be applied is another matter. A person who has perception is never vulgar or even what is called common: neither could be be guilty of any obvious snobbery. It has as much saving virtue as a sense of humor, which also is an invulnerable admonisher to its possessor. We have all of us felt the sense of hopelessness over people who do the wrong thing and who never do and never will know it. The feeling in either great or little things is equally tormenting, whether it is Mr. James' American lady who feels a wild rage that the duchess will wever, never know that she herself is badly gowned and that the former is perfect-ly dressed or a valued friend or relative whom we hopelessly feel must "dree their weird" all for the want of a little in-sight, which we are helpless to give them. It is almost equally aggravating because we realize that an individual afflicted with a want of perception will never become conscious of his infirmity.

How to Clean Old Clothes. For cleaning black silk the cleansing fluid may be either alcohol and water or fluid may be either alcohol and water or cold tea or coffee well strained or the water in which a couple of old black glace kid gloves have been boiled, says The Designer. An ammonia solution is sometimes used with good effect, but in no case must soap or soapy water be employed. The garment should first be picked to pieces and shaken free of dust; then each piece should be laid, right side up, on a smooth, clean, unpainted table and well rubbed with a wad of the silk wet with the cleansing fluid. As each piece is cleaned it should be hung up, without creases, on a line, and by the time all have been cleaned the first will be dry enough for ironing. The silk must be ironed on the wrong side, placing a piece of soft black crinoline between the iron and the silk, and the pressing must be continued until the latter is dry, care being taken to prevent creases and puckerings. After being cleaned and pressed the pieces should be laid away in long drawer or box without folding, and in making up the silk it will be nec essary to use rather more caution than if It were new, owing to the fact that silk which has been wetted and ironed creases very easily. Spots of grease or paint must in all cases be removed before the tleaning process is begun-the former with naphtha or French chalk and the atter with either benzine or turpentine. in removing grease spots with French thalk the latter should be scraped over the spot and the powder left on 12 hours or so, when it should be brushed or blown off: if the spot has not then disappeared. the operation may be repeated. Another method of removing grease spots is to lay the silk, right side down, over a piece of soft blotting paper and then, with the not iron, press it on the wrong side. In most cases the heat of the iron will melt the grease, which will then be absorbed by the blotting paper beneath it. Jet trimmings which have grown dull and dusty from packing or disuse may be restored to their pristine brilliancy and elegance by being first brushed with a fine, soft brush and then sponged with diluted alcohol. After sponging, the jet should be wiped dry with a piece of soft black silk and the broken places carefully

Saying Disagreeable Things. It is unhappily true that many people take great delight in saying disagreeable things to their friends, but there are very few who have sufficient courage or frankness to speak openly or to risk being considered rude or malicious. So they will use a great deal of circumlocution to convey the disagreeable truth or criticism which they feel unable to resist uttering, but for which they do not wish to be held accountable. As every one knows by unpleasant experience, a remark that may wound deeply may be veiled with conventional politeness so thoroughly that the malice of the speaker cannot be detected, and, although you who listen know and the speaker knows, you know that the cutting speech is made with a purpose there is nothing to take exception to. "Do you know how Mrs. Sharp manages to say the most unpleasant things to your face she can think of?" said one of her victims. "She repeats a remark presumably made by a third person, who never existed-an imaginary Mrs. Harris -who says everything she is dving to say herself and does not dare to. I have discovered that she has a regular plan of working. First she begins by exciting your curiosity. She has heard something about you, she gives you to understand in a roundabout fashion, and of course you want to know what it is. 'But it will vex you,' she purs. Then you get wilder than ever and insist upon being told. Finally after much persuasion she tells you of some remark that has been made about you that makes you feel uncomfortable all over. Of course nothing will in duce her to tell you who has said it, and you are left under the impression that it is one of your friends who has either maligned you or exposed your faults. It took me a long time to find her out, but I feel sure now that she makes everything up and then shields herself behind an imaginary third person."—Exchange.

Dry Heat to Relieve Pain. Heat will quiet pain, but it must be a dry heat to accomplish it. Hot water bags are excellent if properly used, while sand or hop bags or ordinary bottles or plates perfectly protected by woolen wrappings are equally efficacious in givor inflammation of any other sort. Frequent changes of these hot, dry applications, so that the warmth is kept up right along, will bring great relief. Blankets are another great aid in pulling a patient through severe neuralgic or inflammatory pains, but the weight of a blanket is in severe pains almost impossible to bear; therefore it is well to cut a good, heavy blanket into four or six pieces for use in the sickroom. Do not hesitate to cut the blanket—the price of the best blanket would go but a small way on a doctor's bill, and it may restore the sufferer to health; and, again, these small squares will last a lifetime for similar cases. These pieces may be heated and tucked around any portion of the body the patient may desire. They will hold heat a long time and will produce a comfort that nothing else can, besides inducing sleep, as a comfortable warmth invariably will. A covering of this sort will protect and ease a larger surface than can be reached by any hot water bag or other such appliance, besides having little or no weight, and this, to the sufferer,

When a patient is not confined to bed. hot water applications are excellent to draw out inflammation, but no wet cloth should ever be used on a patient in bed unless the cloth is well protected by oil silk. Even then it is well to remember that hot, wet cloths retain their heat but a short time and that it is heat, not moisture, that quiets pain.-Clara Burgh in American Queen.

Women In Economics.

An interesting discussion on the relations between woman's development and privileges and her economic independence is reported to have taken place recently in English ladies' literary society. The fundamental relations between property and privilege were discussed, and the peculiar bearing of the generally ac-tepted opinion that "husbands keep their wives." But it was shown that in dowives." But it was shown that in do-mestic labor women really "earn" as much as men do abroad and that the earnings, though not translated into coin earnings, though not translated into coin, can still be reckoned up at the end of the week as so much to the good of the common stock. This can be proved by a husband paying others to do what his wife generally does, and the figures would come out approximately as to what a woman relatively earns, especially among the working classes. Some ladies repu-diated the thought that a woman should or could be paid for what are labors of love, but Mrs. Stopes pointed out that there should be no humiliation if the true conception of matrimony was understood. It should be "a union of souls and a part-It should be "a union of souls and a partnership in interests." In business there may be three partners in a concern; one may be the buyer, another the seller, the third may keep the books. But they all share alike. The separate works of the three are needed to the completion of the whole. So in matrimony. "They who abide with the stuff" should share with those who go forth to war. This was understood by the framers of the prayer book, who bid the man say, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow." If this conception were understood and acted on, there need be no humiliation in women receiving and spending money earned by their husbands, and their due recognition as entities might follow.

A Word In Season.

It is a golden rule to send your wedding gift in good time, the first to arrive being much more appreciated than that which is one of the many pouring in from all quarters during the last week.

By adhering to this rule you are also saved the annoyance of hearing that the salt cellars are charming, the third set already received.

A month before the wedding day is not too early to send the present, which should be accompanied by a visiting card. The package should be addressed to the bride, if you are intimate with both the happy couple, and to the bride's house, addressed to the bridegroom, if it is he with whom you are best acquainted.

Most people wish to give something novel, useful and pretty. The future cir-cumstances of the recipients should influence the choice. If they are going abroad, do not give anything unsuitable to the requirements of the climate or so cumbersome that the packing and conveying to its destination will amount to half the value of the present.

If the recipients will not be particularly well off, says The Ladies' World, it is only kind to select some useful present. In these days, when artistic taste is shown in all the necessities of life, this should not be difficult.

If the happy couple are likely to receive many presents, it is safe to give something which will not be amiss if received in duplicate, such as silver sweetmeat dishes, silver teaspoons or a bronze or china ornament.

Impression of Natural Leaves. Take, for instance, a twig of rose leaves, always ready at hand; lay it flat on the table with glossy side on the wood and the rough, veined part uppermost. Thick leaves have to be kept in place and perfectly smooth with pins. Now dip a small paint brush in a mixture of ivory black and olive oil and go over each leaf with it and without pressing too much, paying special attention to the serrated edges as well as to the raised ribs, nerves, veining and network, as the case may be. As soon as each leaf, tendril and stalk is entirely covered with the mixture proceed with the pressing process. For this open a large, heavy book, in which insert a sheet of perfectly clean and smooth white paper, and on it spread out the wet side of the branch. Close the book and, if necessary, put over it one or two more or some weights as a substitute for a press. After a little while, depending on the size and kind of foliage, open the book, and the foliage will be found stamped on the white sheet of paper. With pen or pencil accentuate any break or faintness in the print. In this wise are obtained excellent designs in perfect imitation of nature to be utilized in every style of decoration and handi-

Is Letter Writing a Bore?

sometimes wish," said the woman, "that there was no such thing as letter writing. Maybe it was all right when it was still an art, but now it is all wrong. When a woman is happy, she is usually too busy to write letters, but when the world is all awry, then she will sit down and relieve her mind by pouring out her feelings in ink and send the result to some member of her family or some confidential friend. It is all right, and I wouldn't begrudge any one the comfort found in writing the letter, but she should never send it. Usually the sorrow is of such short duration that by the time the letter has traveled to the other end its again, but the letter is doing its perfect work in making some one else miserable. When the comforting, sympathetic answer comes, the original perpe-trator has to think for a moment before she can tell what it means."-Cleveland Lines That Tell Age. By the time a girl is 23 or 24 years old she begins to scan her mirror closely in search of the invisible lines about the eyes which betray her years.

The first danger signals which warn one that youth is fleeting are the incipent crow's feet at the corners of the eyes and a delicate network of lines under the low-

A little later on the lower lid often be comes heavy and the lines under it more pronounced. The eye itself seems more deeply set in the socket. Now horizontal lines appear distinctly upon the forehead and vertical ones between the eyes. This is the time when woman, distracted at the knowledge of fading charms, consults a specialist and tries the massage cure.

A College of Matrimony. A woman's college of matrimony is a new century idea which, it is reported, will be put into practical execution in Chelsea, England. The duties of a wife will become the subject of a two years' course of study. The curriculum will embrace not only the usual branches of housewifery, such as cooking, sewing and laundry work, but is intended to deal with physiology and medicine as well.

A mixture of corrosive sublimate and alcohol, sprayed in crevices through an alcohol, sprayed in crevices through an atomizer, will banish the pests of the bedroom more effectually than any other agent, save quicksilver, applied with white of egg. The wise doman who is troubled with such unwelcome visitants will use the spray first to kill the creatures and then paint every available spot of their dwelling with the quicksilver to keep them away. keep them away.
